SUSTAINED ENGAGEMENT IN A LONG MOVEMENT

DONATE YOUR MONEY, TIME, OR TALENTS

There are opportunities to give financially to national, regional, or local non-profit organizations dedicated to facilitating social change. You can find organizations and collectives that align with your interests and passions.

- reclaimtheblock.org
- jacobcampanialeaders.org
- naacp.org
- ejlong.org

There are also local organizations that may need assistance with virtual work and volunteer efforts. If you have a particular expertise, offer it!

ORGANIZE AND PROTEST

There is power in protest and the use of a collective voice. You can join others to publicly express opinions and demand change.

- BRING PROTEST SIGNS
- BRING IDENTIFICATION
- BRING WATER AND SNACKS
- WRITE EMERGENCY CONTACTS DOWN
- BRING CASH

It is still important to follow Covid-19 precautionary measures including wearing a mask and maintaining social distance when possible. Please remember that protests can take unexpected turns, stay aware and safe if you choose to participate.

INTERROGATE YOUR BOOKSHELF AND FOLLOW LIST

Draw on the scholarship of scholars, journalists, and activists from a wide range of disciplines and fields.

- THE 1619 PROJECT
- CAROL ANDERSON, WHITE RAGE
- PAMELA NEWKIRK, DIVERSITY INC.

There are sharp and engaging advocates and scholars that you can follow on social media to stay updated on their latest published pieces, webinars, and interviews:

- MICHELLE KIM
- KHALIL MUHAMMAD, PHD
- SEAN HARPER, PHD
- MELISSA VALLE, PHD

LIFELONG LEARNING

Register for seminars, lectures, and panel discussions. Scholars, community organizers, and non-profit organizations are offering free or low-cost opportunities to learn and engage on topics of racial and social justice. This continued engagement is also a way to actively work on allyship.

- USC RACE AND EQUITY CENTER
- HARVARD KENNEDY SCHOOL – INSTITUTIONAL ANTIRACISM AND ACCOUNTABILITY PROJECT
- Racial Equity Institute

Be sure to check with your professional associations and organizations to learn about their offerings.

CONTACT YOUR LEGISLATORS

Use resources and technologies that are available to you and reach out to legislators. You can reach out to elected officials via phone, email, or even handwritten letters. These are ways you can let them know what matters to you.

EDUCATION AND AWARENESS. ACTIVISM. IDENTITY DEVELOPMENT.
